

Methodologies and Best Practices

“I have not failed. I have simply found 10 000 ways that don’t work.” -Thomas Edison

What do poor project management, unrealistic schedules, inadequate analysis techniques and bad tools selection strategies have in common? They are all traditional examples of problems connected to software development which lead to the failure of a project. However, despite all these bad approaches, software development organizations still repeat the same mistakes. Still nowadays, the software industry suffers from maturity and discipline in regards to the development of a product in conformity with the requirements, the deadlines and the cost envisaged. Indeed, it is common to perceive a feeling of dissatisfaction and faintness when a customer tests his software for the very first time.

Qualibre Technologies consultants know that software organizations have much more to gain when adopting a systematic approach to quality assurance based on structured, disciplined processes and worthy of best practices. A best practice is simply a systematic approach approved and recognized by professional individuals whose objective is to allow you to gain a higher level of competence.

Agile
RUP
ITIL
CMMI
Six Sigma

Our industry is currently juggling with various acronyms and names related to software development methodologies and best practices. Remember that there are no silver bullets in regards to software development. In fact, no one methodology can bring total satisfaction to your organization. Our consultants have the knowledge and expertise to assist you in adopting key processes which will help you gain a competitive advantage and a higher return on investment.

Each software methodologies hide many years of research, know-how and expertise. In order to remain competitive in your market, you probably don’t have the time, nor the experience to study and recommend software development methodologies to your own organization. Leave this burden to Qualibre Technologies consultants. They have the necessary knowledge and experience to help you reach the success which you aim. Our expert advisers will provide training, coaching and accompaniment throughout this activity. Moreover, we will propose you some key practices and approaches that you could adopt in an easy and simple manner in order to improve your performances and increase your potential.